Acknowledgments

The editors would like to express their appreciation to several publications and publishers for permission to reprint edited versions of the following materials in this book. “Cyberfaith: How Americans Pursue Religion Online,” by Elena Larsen and the Pew Internet and American Life Project, is available as a report at www.pewinternet.org. “Cyberspace as Sacred Space: Communicating Religion on Computer Networks” by Stephen D. O’Leary is a slightly edited version of an article that first appeared in the Journal of the American Academy of Religion 64, 1996: 781–808. “New Religions and the Internet: Recruiting in a New Public Space” by Lorne L. Dawson and Jenna Hennebry is a slightly edited version of an article that first appeared in the Journal of Contemporary Religion 14, 1999: 17–39, www.tandf.co.uk/journals/carfax/13537903.html. Chapter 10, “The Cybersangha: Buddhism on the Internet” by Charles S. Prebish, is a modified version of Chapter 5 of Prebish’s book Luminous Passage: The Practice and Study of Buddhism in America (Berkeley, CA: University of California Press). Chapter 15, “Virtual Pilgrimage to Ireland’s Croagh Patrick” by Mark MacWilliams, modifies and extends material that first appeared in “Virtual Pilgrimages on the Internet,” Religion 32, 2002: 315–335, published by Elsevier.

Finally, as always, Douglas Cowan would like to thank his wife Joie for her endless patience and unfailing support. Lorne Dawson would like to thank his wife Dianne for providing the loving support that makes everything possible, including this book.
